

Kathleen M. Fox, FASLA
Executive Director
Ohio Cultural Facilities Commission

Since 1993 Kathy Fox has served as the Executive Director of the Ohio Cultural Facilities Commission, which oversees state capital improvement funds for community cultural facility projects including non-profit theaters, museums, historical sites and publicly owned professional sports venues. In 2002 Kathy was a Loeb Fellow at Harvard University, where she explored how arts and cultural facilities can become more integral to community revitalization efforts.

Kathy is a registered Landscape Architect, past national Vice President of the American Society of Landscape Architects (ASLA), and past Chair of the ASLA Council of Fellows. She previously chaired the Ohio Arts Council's Design Arts Panel and Art in Public Places Panel, as well as the advisory board for Ohio's Historic Preservation Office. Kathy currently serves as president of the Columbus Metropolitan Club and on the boards of Campus Partners for Community Urban Redevelopment, the Harvard University Graduate School of Design Alumni Council, the Strategy Council for The Ohio State University College of Engineering, and the Jefferson Center for Learning and the Arts.

Prior to her work with the Ohio Cultural Facilities Commission, Kathy was the founding executive director of the Capitol Square Foundation, a non-profit organization established to assist with the restoration of Ohio's state capital building and grounds. In this role, she oversaw a multi-million dollar capital campaign, directed a statewide public awareness campaign and created educational programs.

Kathy is the recipient of a Distinguished Alumna Award from The Ohio State University Knowlton School of Architecture, and has won numerous awards from the Ohio Chapter of the American Society of Landscape Architects. She received the Business First "Forty Under 40" award, and was featured in 2007 as one of "12 Women You Should Know" by Women for Economic and Leadership Development.
